Use of third-party material:

Please note that third-party copyrighted material reproduced in your article should as a general rule be cleared for use by the rights holders, with special attention being paid to creative works, including images. However, it is the custom and practice in academic publishing that the reproduction of visual material that is in the public domain, as well as short extracts of text (excluding poetry and song lyrics) and some other types of material on a very limited basis for the purposes of criticism or review may be possible where full acknowledgement is given.

Please choose from the following:

	I have obtained the appropriate permissions for use of third-party material, as required, and kept copies of correspondence.
	I am still working through permissions-related questions regarding use of third-party material.
	I am not using third-party material for which formal permission is required.
	I am using visual material that is available in the public domain.

By submitting your article or content for publication you acknowledge and agree on behalf of yourself and all co-authors that, if it is accepted for publication:

- Image & Text's publishing terms will apply and take precedence over any other terms that you assert during the submission or publication process to any version of this article and content;
- You or your co-authors have not previously assigned or licensed rights to any other third-party for this article or content that would conflict with any rights to be granted in the publishing terms, and take precedence over any version of this article or content;
- You and all co-authors are willing and able to proceed with publication;
- You will have your submission professionally edited before publication.
